RATTAN LAMP SHADES

The rattan lampshades convince through their clean and organic design. They represent a great blend of texture and contemporary shapes. Rattan lampshades combine well in a Scandinavian, Boho, Bali chic or any modern interior style.

Materials & Production

Rattan is a strong natural fiber. It grows abundantly and naturally without any fertilizers or pesticides and improves biodiversity by co-existing with other vegetation. Only the lianas of the rattan are used to make the lamps so the tree is not cut and can be harvested for a few decades without harming the environment around it. The entire production process, from harvesting to designing is executed by hand.

The makers

Wawan and Navi used to sell their homemade lampshades from a small shop on Bali, Indonesia. Since we start working together their workshop is moved to East Java Indonesia where they have created jobs for at least 20 weavers from the neighbouring villages. They participate in the originalhome sustainable entrepreneur development program.

ABACA LAMPSHADES

Abaca lampshades are perfect to achieve a more organic look & feel in an interior. The leafy materials add texture to the lampshade and combined with the handmade organic shapes they bring nature home.

Materials & Production

Abaca is a strong natural fiber that is derived from the bark of a banana tree from small banana plantations of Java, Indonesia. Abaca is a waste product from the banana plantations. A banana tree matures in 9 months, which makes it a quickly renewable resource, and produces only 1 time its fruits. After one year the tree is cut to regrow. The bark is stripped and this material is given a second life to weave lampshades and baskets out of it. The entire production process is executed by hand.

The makers

Johni & Lola are sustainable pioneers from origin. They founded their company in 1995 and out of respect for the natural resources of Java and solely use natural, sustainable raw materials for the production of home decoration and use all materials as efficiently as possible. As true pioneers they developed multiple ways to recycle and apply new materials such as newspapers and old cement bag paper. Currently 30 people are working for them from different workshop locations on Java Indonesia.

RECLAIMED TEAK LAMPSHADES

The lampshades, made from reclaimed teak, are durable and can last a lifetime. The clean yet organic design add a natural earthy look & feel to any style interior. Due to the natural and organic drawings on the wood, every lampshade is unique.

Materials & Production

The raw material that is used for the wooden lampshades comes from the root of a teak tree: a waste product from the teak plantations in Java, Indonesia. Teak root is discarded wood and must be unearthed for new plantings. The roots are collected, cleaned and traditionally handcrafted into lampshades by local villagers. Teak root wood is very durable and sustainable. It will last a lifetime.

The makers

The teakroot lampshades are designed and packed in a small design workshop in Indonesia. The workshop was founded to repurpose waste wood and to support local communities by creating job opportunities. The woodcrafting workshop is based in East Java Indonesia and provide jobs for marginalized people; teaching them a craft and providing structure and income.
